

Are you prepared financially
for a medical emergency?

MASA  Medical Transport Solutions™

Emergencies can happen to anyone, anytime and anywhere.

As we all know, sudden medical needs can happen to anyone, any where, at any time. If the unexpected happens to you, are you prepared to cover costs that typical medical insurance does not pay?

Did you know that a ground ambulance can cost up to $2,400? Most people assume that their health insurance will cover the cost. Usually the opposite it true. Or you are left with a very high deductible.

If the EMT crew decides that you need an air ambulance, are you ready to pay for a $5,000+ helicopter transportation fee?

What if you need specialized treatment at a specific medical facility that is more than 50 miles away from your home? How will you get there? How will you pay for it? The average airplane ambulance (medically-equipped, fixed-wing aircraft) starts at $20,000 and requires payment before liftoff.

Sadly, many people do NOT plan for these undesirable and unexpected situations. And they're shocked to receive an exorbitant medical bill – after-the-fact. What awaits them is a bureaucratic nightmare to get their bill reduced or forgiven. Even worse, some people are left behind to handle their financial crisis by themselves because they don't know where or how to get help.

MASA Medical Transport Solutions is your answer to these problems.

It started out a normal day at home...

Claire began experiencing acute chest pains. Fearing a heart attack, her husband immediately dialed 911, and an ambulance rushed Claire to the hospital. The cause of her pain turned out to be a severe gallbladder attack and acute gout in 80 percent of the joints in her body. Immediate surgery and treatment was needed. Since the couple has insurance coverage and a supplemental health insurance policy, they assumed that all of their expenses would be covered.

When an ambulance service sent a $1,627 bill demanding payment for medical transport, the couple was stunned to learn that their insurance provider had denied coverage for Claire's trip to the hospital due to the medical notes provided by the hospital. The insurance company claimed that Claire's severe issues weren't a medical emergency; therefore, they declined to pay the ambulance fee. Understandably puzzled and upset, the couple turned to MASA Medical Transport Solutions for help.

Used to dealing with insurance companies and red tape, MASA Medical Transport Solutions personnel went to work unraveling the billing codes and documentation on Claire's medical transportation invoice. The company worked with the hospital, ambulance service and her insurance and supplemental insurance providers to make sure that Claire's transportation costs were covered without the couple incurring any additional expense.

"We never thought we would really have to use our MASA Emergent membership, but we are so thankful we invested the small amount to be covered during this unexpected situation. Our MASA Emergent membership truly provides peace of mind and has proved to be a great investment that saved us a lot of money and hassle during a stressful time in our lives. Because of MASA Medical Transport Solutions and their services, I was able to focus on my recovery and get back to good health. Thank you MASA Medical Transport Solutions," Claire shared.

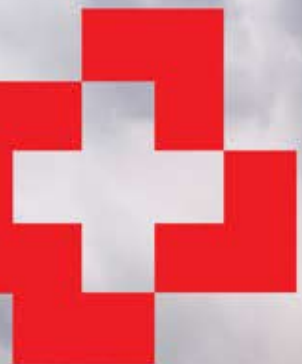

Emergencies can happen to you.

In one year, nearly 50% of U. S. residents visit an emergency room.

Costs for an air ambulance transport range from $2,000 to $50,000, not including the cost for ground transportation from the aircraft landing to the hospital.

Be prepared for the unexpected with a MASA Emergent membership. No matter where you live, you could have access to vital emergency medical transportation for a minimal monthly fee. That membership could one day save your life. And every day, it will give you peace of mind like nothing else.

Coverage against medical surprises is surprisingly affordable.

You've done your best to provide benefits to your employees, but there's vital coverage that is often forgotten. Who can your employees turn to if they're miles away from the proper emergency medical treatment? What kind of costs will they have to bear if they become ill or injured when they're away from home?

Uncertainty like this can weigh heavily on your employees. Why not provide them the security of MASA Emergent for their physical and financial well-being?

With MASA Emergent, you and your employees can be covered for emergency airplane, helicopter or ground ambulance expenses anywhere in the U. S., with no out-of-pocket cost. Imagine being able to live or travel wherever you desire and have the peace of mind that you're covered for what can be a very expensive part of a medical emergency.

Reassuring coverage like this is surprisingly affordable. Contact your MASA Medical Transport Solutions representative today to get your company's personalized plan started right away.
