VISION EXAM RECOMMENDATIONS

Many people want to know how often they should have their eyes examined. The answer depends on your age, medical background and risk factors for disease. In general, eye doctors recommend the following exam schedules:

Children

- Newborn to 3 months
- 6 months to 1 year
- 3 years (approximately)
- 5 years (approximately)

Adults

- Once between age 20 and 39
- Age 40-64, every two to four years
- Age 65 and older, every one to two years

Routine eye exams can help detect medical eye problems. In addition, some factors may put you at increased risk for eye disease. If any of these factors applies to you, check with a qualified eye specialist to see how often you should have a medical eye exam:

- Developmental delay
- Premature birth
- Personal or family history of eye disease
- African-American heritage (African-Americans are at increased risk for glaucoma)
- Previous serious eye injury
- Use of certain medications (check with your eye doctor)
- Some diseases that affect the whole body (such as diabetes) Medical eye exams are covered by medical insurance, not Vision Louisiana.

Take good care of your eyes - because there's so much more in life to see!
