Be prepared for the unexpected

Get financial and emotional support following a cancer diagnosis

Chances are that you or someone you know has been affected by cancer. While survival rates keep rising, diagnosis and ongoing treatment can still bring unexpected costs. Even with medical insurance, there may be lost wages and out-of-pocket expenses that can significantly impact finances. Transportation to chemotherapy, medication co-pays, and hospital deductibles can add up fast — but cancer insurance may give you critical financial support when you and your family need it most.

Who is it for?

- Anyone concerned about financial support during cancer treatment and recovery.
- People who want to supplement a traditional or high-deductible medical plan.
- Those with a family history of cancer.

What does it cover?

- Cancer insurance can help pay medical plan deductibles, co-pays, and other out-of-pocket costs by providing fixed benefit payments when you are diagnosed with cancer, receive radiation or chemotherapy treatment, or are hospitalized for surgery.
- Benefits can be used for medical and non-medical expenses, such as transportation to treatment facilities, or even everyday expenses like groceries, rent, and mortgage payments.
- There's no need to submit receipts, and plan benefits are paid in addition to your medical insurance — no matter what type of coverage you have.

Did you know?

51% of cancer patients and survivors reported incurring medical debt from costs related to cancer care.[1]

Why should I consider it?

- Fixed benefit amounts are paid directly to you and you decide how to use them.
- You can take the coverage with you if you change jobs or retire.
- Convenient payroll deduction.

Here's an example of how it works

Mary had a cancer screening test and was diagnosed with kidney cancer. Her cancer insurance plan provided fixed benefit payments based on her diagnosis, treatment, medication, and follow-up screenings. The benefits helped ease her financial worries and allowed her to focus once again on her journey back to wellness.
